To the Editor:

It was in my usual state of complacency, I prefer to call it open-mindedness, that I sat among what is left of the ivy and read the HERALD's reports of the Campus Action Council's recent demonstration regarding the CIA, including the article by Miss Reid (p. 1, col. 5 & 6) wherein the objectives of the CAC were set forth: "... and the University was made aware of student objections to the CIA private interviews on campus." [Emphasis supplied.] I am now stirred out of my lethargy.

I resent and reject the fact that a group of ungroomed, unshaved, and unshowered morons stand up and attempt to represent, or misrepresent, or even purport to represent my views. My unlimited magnanimity and tolerance notwithstanding, I feel that I am capable of representing, or misrepresenting, my own views.

I call to your attention the CAC insertion in the "Notices" column (p. 4) and also the rather poor turnout that this and similar demonstrations have attracted on this campus. I don't feel this is the product of lethargy, as some people are quick to point out, but rather that students' views, whatever they may be, for I do not claim to represent them, are far too varied to be represented by any one group. I seriously doubt that even the CAC really believes that it speaks for the undergraduate body, and I urge that they acknowledge the fact that their actions are, insofar as they can be sure, the result of their member's individual views alone.
